Who Do People Say You Are?

FR. JOSEPH JUKNIALIS

Pain is the body's alarm clock that something is broken or not working correctly. Suffering, on the other hand, is a marker of our identity and points to what we value. Suffering through the struggles of raising a family says, "I am a parent. That's what parents do." Mental suffering that accompanies committed love says to the world that "I am married. This is something to be valued." Suffering seems to accompany our commitments and consequently contributes to our identity. We don't suffer over what is unimportant in our lives. When Peter recognized that Jesus was the Christ, the Messiah, Jesus then pointed out what sort of commitment accompanied being the Christ—that he would suffer greatly, be killed, and then rise on the third day. It was all much to Peter's dismay, especially when Jesus noted that those who follow him can expect similar suffering.

The suffering that flows from our own commitments may not pin us to a physical cross, but it often reveals a faithfulness to live out the values of Jesus. For people of faith, those values become woven into our everyday living: of raising a difficult child, caring for aging parents, working at jobs that sap our energy, or tolerating those who are unkind. Many times, we may not display those values as a conscious expression of our faith, yet it does point to who we are—followers of Jesus. ●

Reflect

Does your suffering reflect your values, your commitment to follow Jesus?

[Jesus asked the disciples],
"But who do you say that I am?"
Peter said to him in reply,
"You are the Messiah."

PRO-LIFE NEWS

MAiD in Canada is the world's fastest growing assisted dying program.

MAiD was not meant to become a routine way of dying. It was supposed to be "a carefully monitored system." The then Minister of Justice and Attorney General Jody Wilson-Raybould agreed "We do not wish to promote premature death as a solution to all medical suffering." The reality today, MAiD assessors and providers do not treat it as a last resort. The percentage of MAiD requests that are denied continues to decline. MAiD requests can be assessed and provided in a single day.

Eradicating the Demand with Technology: One Buyer at a Time

On Monday, September 16 (@11am in SK), join the Sexual Exploitation Working Group of the Canadian Council of Churches for the second of three webinars!

One of the priorities of the Commission on Justice and Peace Sexual Exploitation Working Group is to educate, advocate, and theologically reflect on the area of sexual exploitation and demand reduction. True justice requires reducing the demand. The demand for paid sexual services is what fuels sex trafficking. Minimize demand: minimize the need for vulnerable individuals to be exploited to meet the demand.

Our guest speaker, Brian Rae, grew up in North Africa where he developed a heart for justice at a young age, inspiring him to pursue a legal career. After passing the bar exams, Brian chose to set aside his legal career to focus on combating sex trafficking through technology and compassionate care. Now based in Victoria, BC, he leads Buyer Resist, a technology organization dedicated to eliminating the demand for sex trafficking. At the heart of Buyer Resist's efforts is an artificial intelligence-powered chatbot that intercepts men who are buying sex and guides them towards recovery from sexual addiction and brokenness.

A Boy's Remembrances of Carving Jesus at Holy Cross

This past August Frank Berger, Francine, paid Holy Cross a visit. As a boy, he had witnessed the carving of the Christ figure in our church.

Below are excerpts from a memoir I am very grateful for his efforts. His full living in Regina and his family is available Gerein Centre.

“When I described Holy Cross Church a boy, the on-site sculpting of the Christ limestone Cross, she {frank’s wife out of Tyndall stone limestone, the to construct the Legislative building.

traveling from B.C. with his wife boy, he had witnessed the carving of the he wrote at my request.

memoir article including experiences of as a few paper copies to pick up in the and mentioned how I had witnessed, as figure in limestone directly on the Francine} was intrigued. It was carved same limestone used, I recently learned, Francine was keen to see it.”

“The church just happened to be two blocks up from on Francis Street where I grew up. The new Holy Cross Church was under construction [this would have been the summer of 1960] and at the stage where the terrazzo flooring by the Antonioni family, (for some reason I remember their name), was poured, set hard and ready to walk or ride a bike on. The day I most remember I was tooling around on my bike right up and inside to the front of the Church where a scaffold had been erected where the altar would go. Still straddled on my bike, I watched, spell-bound at the work in progress. The sculptor on the scaffold, an inspired artist, was using hammer and chisel and was chipping away creating the figure of Christ on the Cross. [This was Hubert Garnier] Occasionally he referred to a small maquette, a miniature, ten-inch tall crucifix that he used as a guide. What an unforgettable sight. I came back regularly to watch the progress.”

“He [Fr. Hogan] got us all excited about the new Church that was planned for us, to be built just down the street also on Douglas Avenue. He wanted us young parishioners of the future to actually feel involved in the project. I like to think that, in hindsight, he was still fishing for ideas as to the actual design. So, he gave us a special assignment: We were to go home and think about what we could imagine the new church could look like, make drawings and hand them in the following week. My twin brother and I both needed some inspiration badly and two different ideas. We were both stuck. However, not really. We just had to ask our older brother Bob for help.

“Easy to bring on board, Bob, seven or eight years our senior, enthusiastically helped each of us draw a design for the new church. One looked like a slightly smaller version of St. Peter’s Basilica in Rome and the other a simpler more modern rectangular design with a slightly V” or prow-shaped front in form like the bow of a ship with two sets of doors, one on each side. The steeple was a tall narrow cross somewhat similar to the cross on the church as it now stands, if my memory serves me right. Each drawing was a perfect work of draftsmanship. (As was his penmanship which we always tried to emulate). I liked to think that my brother’s drawing was given to the architect which inspired the final plans and construction.”

Frank Berger, August 2024

Tyndall Stone was named after the small community in Manitoba near Garson where it is found. The quarry is operated by Gillis Quarries Ltd. and has been owned by the same family since 1910. Canada is the only source in the world for this stone.

The stone is grey to tan in colour and mottled or blotchy in appearance. The mottling is the preserved tunnels made by burrowing marine animals seeking food and refuge from predators. We don't know exactly what they were but some were probably a kind of arthropod like an ancient shrimp while others were ancient worms.

A Boy's Remembrances of Carving Jesus at Holy Cross

Notes On The Figure of Christ Crucified

The one and one half ton figure of Christ stands 6 feet, eight inches tall.

Valued at $5000 at the time, the figure is made of Manitoba buff Tyndall stone limestone.

Carved by Hubert Garnier of Winnipeg. He was born in France and his work is seen all across Canada, including the Royal Saskatchewan Natural History Museum.

The figure is stylized, as there is emphasis on the hands and arms, which are larger than the rest of the figure.

It took more than two months to carve. He used a pneumatic chisel to speed up the process. Without it, he estimated it would have taken closer to 6 months to finish.

According to our history books the figure was donated by Knights or Columbus Mgrs. Jansen Council No. 4959.

First mass sung at Holy Cross

A pontifical mass celebrated by Most Rev. M. C. O'Neill, archbishop of Regina, Sunday afternoon marked the official opening of Holy Cross Roman Catholic church at 315 Douglas avenue east.

Archbishop O'Neill also pronounced the blessing on the new church, its pastor and parishioners.

Holy Cross parish, which has been in existence for two years, has been using St. Andrew's school for services and only last month moved into its new $178,000 building.

Rev. M. J. Hogan, parish priest said Sunday the parish is actually part of Little Flower parish and was formed to provide worship facilities for the residents of Douglas Park, a new subdivision in the southeast part of the city. The move was made when Little Flower parish got too big.

The sermon at the official opening was preached by Mgr. F. Gerein, of the Little Flower parish.

Designed by Regina architect E. J. McCuddin, the modern structure was built by Piggott Construction Limited, of Saskatoon, and including fees and furnishings cost the parish more than $200,000.

The new parish contains about 350 families, Rev. Hogan said.
